The epitaph collector displayed enthusiastically the photograph of a severe and stately marble tomb.

"A new epitaph," he said, "and one of the best in my collection. It is the epitaph of a body of Indians slain in battle near Cooperstown. It was composed by a clergyman, W. W. Lord, and I consider it most poetical."

The epitaph on the stately tomb was as follows:

"White Man, Greeting! We, near whose bones you stand, were Iroquois.

"The Wide Land which now is yours was ours.

"Friendly hands have given back to us enough for a tomb."

Notes by the Way.

Parchment paper is made by dipping ordinary unsized paper in diluted sulphuric acid and then washing it.

We beg to acknowledge with thanks a copy of Les Timbres Cantonaix de la Suisse, published by Chas. Mendel, Paris.

Collectors who exchange with other countries would do well to take advantage of our Sale and Exchange department.

An unusually fine unused copy of the very rare sixpence scarlet vermilion postage stamp of Newfoundland issue of 1857, brought $210 at the Collectors' Club in West 26th. St., New York.

Among the British Colonial rarities were two fine used unsevered pairs of the Barbados, 1878 issue, one penny surcharges on halves of five shilling stamps, each pair different from the other. They sold respectively for $60 and for $58.

Two rare unused British official revenue stamps of the 1902 issue, one a five shilling carmine and the other a ten shilling ultramarine, fetched respectively $50 and $52.

COINS.

In view of the discussion over the motto, "In God We Trust" on U. S. coins, a collection of such mottoes made by an Italian student, Amerigo Scarlatti, is interesting. Scarlatti is of the opinion that such inscriptions, though not intended to be cynical, too often admit of such an interpretation through the irresistable habit of the public ignoring the intention of the designer and applying the motto to the coin itself.

Thus, when Charles II, king of the Two Sicilies, had engraved on his silver ducat the Latin words "Unis non Sufficit" meaning "One is not enough" all the world insisted on forgetting that the king referred to a single sceptre and enthusiastically agreed with him that one ducat wasn't enough for any one.

On the contrary, a storm of ironical opposition was aroused when Louis de Bourbon, king of Etruria, in the early part of the last century inscribed "Videant Pauperes et Lactentur" on his coins. The words mean "Let the Poor see and rejoice," and of course every one wanted to know why a poor man should rejoice at merly seeing a piece of money.

On the papal coinage of 1573 bearing the arms of Gregory XII. are the words "Et Super Hanc Petram" (and upon this rock). of course the pope and artist who designed the coin meant the words to refer to the papacy, but the evil minded applied them so maliciously to the coin itself that the issue was at once stopped. A similar opportunity for evil tongues was afforded when the Knights of Malta coined an issue of dollars with the sign of their order, the Maltese cross, and their motto, "In hoc Signo Militamus" (in this sign we combat). The ribald affected to take it as a confession that with them money was truly the sinew of war.

A Venitian lira dated 1474 has the somewhat ambiguous motto, "In Tibi Solo Gloria" (to thee alone the glory). A sequin coined by Cardinal Rezgonico in 1774 bears the words "Veni Lumen Cordium," or "come thou light of hearts." Clement XI issued a coin with an image of the Madonna with the legend "Causa Nostrae Laetitiae" (cause of our joy), and a Venitian piece with an allegorical figure of Justice with the words "Nostra in hac Felicitas" (Our happiness is this). All of these inscriptions were irreverently diverted by contemporaries from their true objects to the money itself.

The Roumanian crown is made of metal from Turkish cannon captured at Plevna in 1877. It is not covered with a thin layer of gold and enamel like the Servian crown, but has an unadorned circlet of steel.
